

Tim Harris

Tim was born in the UK but has spent around half his life overseas. He trained in Emergency Medicine and Intensive care medicine in Australia. He worked in Emergency Medicine for 25 years, prehospital care for 15 years (in Australia (Victoria and Sydney Lifesaver) and UK (London HEMS and East Anglia Air Ambulance)) and Intensive care for 10 years (Melbourne Australia, Barts Health UK). His clinical career has been based around major trauma centres in Australia the UK and Qatar. He has worked in 43 hospitals in 11 countries and mixed training with travel for volunteer work in Africa, India and Samoa.

Tim has worked at Barts Health for 15 years and was appointed Professor Emergency Medicine at QMUL and BH in 2012. In 2018 he moved to Hamad General Hospital, Doha; one of the largest ED in the world seeing 1400-1800 patients each day.

He divides his academic time between teaching and research. His main interests are resuscitation, ultrasound and education. His research time is focussed facilitating and recruiting to large multicentre studies. He has published around 100 papers and leads on an MSc in resuscitation medicine and QMUL. Currently he works in Qatar as deputy chair for Emergency Medicine and lead for academic affairs, and at QMUL as Professor Emergency Medicine.
